

Four in a row for top recovery lawyers

Specialist debt litigation lawyers Drydens have secured the top spot for the fourth year in a row in Legal 500's debt recovery category. The highly regarded independent directory is published annually and ranks Drydens in its top category in Yorkshire and the Humber and London. The firm's listing includes a quote from a client interviewed by researchers, "Everyone at the firm is a pleasure to deal with and we have full confidence in the whole team."

Drydens, which was formed in 2003, employs over 140 people at its award-winning offices in Bradford. The firm has a particular emphasis on consumer finance litigation representing leading banks, building societies and credit card providers, as well as having extensive expertise in the area of civil recovery where it recovers monies on behalf of large retailers. Other areas of work includes government agency debt litigation, utility recoveries and business-to-business debt actions.

Chief Executive Rachael Charmbury said, "Securing this ranking in Legal 500 is extremely important to us as the publication is well read and regarded by in house legal teams in the country's leading organisations. The independent manner in which the Legal 500 researchers prepare the entries mean the position we achieve is particularly valuable and I am delighted that our experienced, approachable and professional team has been recognised in such a positive manner."

The
LEGAL 500

"Drydens is a specialist, 37-partner debt litigation firm - the result of a demerger from Hammonds LLP back in 2003 - and is led by the very capable Rachael Charmbury and Tamsin Cooper. It has a particular focus on the consumer finance recoveries market."

The "very capable" Rachael Charmbury (left) and Tamsin Cooper (right).

not just another law firm